

Merrimack County Conservation District's

“2019 Conservation Day”

Tuesday, May 7th 2019

9 am – 1 pm

Beech Hill Farm, Hopkinton, NH

The Merrimack County Conservation District is hosting a “Conservation Day” at Beech Hill Farm in Hopkinton for area science classes for middle and high school students. This is ideal for students interested in biology, environmental science, sustainable agriculture, or other environment related courses.

Students will learn about conservation issues in a hands-on manner, taught by professionals in the designated field. Students will rotate through stations set up around the farm as they learn about soils, aquatics, forestry, wildlife, sustainable agriculture, technology and conservation, effective conservation communication, and more! This is a great training opportunity for students involved in NH Envirothon!

Transportation, chaperones, and lunch/snacks are NOT provided; please make arrangements with your school. There ARE bathroom facilities at Beech Hill Farm. Merrimack County Conservation District will also provide free ice cream for all involved! Be sure to remind your students to wear appropriate clothing and footwear for walking between stations on the farm.

This event is FREE but SPACE IS LIMITED!

Registration will be on a first-come, first-served basis. To reserve your class’s spot, please fill out the information below and return as soon as possible! You may also email the information at the below address.

For more information or questions, please contact Rebecca Yohe, Assistant District Manager at Rebecca.yohe@nh.nacdnet.net or by calling the MCCD office at 603.223.6020.
